Hickman loses life-long resident Robinson

Charlotte Smith
Editor

Last week Hickman lost another one of its life-long residents who enjoyed people and made friends wherever he went. Coy Robinson, Jr., 79, passed away Friday, Nov. 28 in Hickman. Robinson was active within the city as a business owner, commissioner and supporter of community events.

Growing up Robinson picked cotton and chopped crops just like so many others did back in the 40s and 50s when cotton was king. "Those were some busy times," Robinson said during an April 2008 interview.

Robinson remembered picking a lot of cotton so he could buy some clothes. He earned $3 a day chopping crops.

Robinson grew up on his grandmother's 40-acre farm in the Lower Bottom. He moved when he was about 11 years old.

He attended school in 1955 at Murray State Teacher's College.

Robinson spent 22 years with the Army Corps of Engineers before going into the construction business, which he operated for 10 years.

He purchased his first liquor business for $850 from Guy Hale. The business was located downtown and his father helped him with the business early on. Robinson was in the liquor business for 48 years.

Active in the community, Robinson was a city commissioner for more than a decade, sat on the Hickman-Fulton County Riverport Authority Board for four years and attended many area functions such as the ARK chili supper, Chamber Ice Cream Social and more.

In Robinson's spare time he loved to travel, visiting every BUILDING HOPE - Hope Center looks to expand with a mobile unit in Fulton County called Hope Fulton.

Hope Center looks to add Hope Fulton to their family

Charlotte Smith
Editor

The Hope Center, organized by a group of concerned citizens in 1996, is FULLY donor funded. "That is one of the most amazing things, we can truly see the community coming together to support this mission," stated Karastin Hancock, Communication Director, Hope Center.

During the Community Thanksgiving Service held at Hickman First United Methodist Church on Sunday, Nov. 23, Tabitha Smith, Center Director, informed those gathered together about a new project concerning the Hope Center in Fulton County.

They would like to hire a staff member for one day a week to see clients and hold classes for individuals and groups at a mobile Hope Center in Fulton County. "This is a new adventure for us all. So a lot of it is trial," stated Hancock. "We would, obviously, love to build the program to have a full-time staff and volunteer program in Hickman."

Hope Center, a pregnancy center, began in Mayfield and has spread out over the last 18 years, now servicing people in four counties, including Fulton, Hickman, Carlisle and Graves. "These counties allow us to come into their public schools and teach an Abstinence based program called 'Choosing The Best,'" explained Hancock.

Back on November 23, Smith informed everyone that they teach this class to students in sixth through twelfth grades, focusing on helping students to make better decisions, goals, relationships, risky behaviors, STDs, friendships, and so much more.

"We want the students to be aware of the consequences of risky behaviors, and we present those in a very interactive way," added Hancock. "The response we get to the program is amazing. The students are always so glad we came."

Henderson entertains through books, movies

Charlotte Smith
Editor

At the young age of 10, Jacob Henderson, knew he wanted to entertain people. "I have always been into movies and I have always wanted to some how be involved in the field of entertainment," said the Cayce native. His first avenue of entertaining people was writing anything and everything from short stories, to movies and even novels.

Currently studying film at Full Sail University in Florida, through online classes, Henderson, a 2005 graduate of Fulton County High School, is learning all about screen writing and directing. "When I was younger I would write movie scripts and then my friends from around town would help me bring my scripts to life like a home movie."

Through the years Henderson wrote three books never sharing them. "I deleted them," he said. "I just didn't know what to do with them."

When his cousin, Misty Watts, became a published author he decided it was time to put pen to paper again, writing a fictional book. "I learned the process of publishing from Misty," he said. "It encouraged me to start writing again and I ran with it."

"I didn't enjoy reading when I was younger, but there are two authors that I actually read from cover to cover," he said. Henderson chose to draw his inspiration for his style of writing from them. Those writers are J.K. Rowling and Stephenie Meyer.

Henderson's first book series is supernatural fiction entitled "The Angel Series, Book One, Immortal Blood."

"In the first book of the series a young man becomes half angel when he turns 17," said Henderson. "He knows nothing about it. It just comes upon him."

The high school junior soon receives a visit from Gabriel the Angel and is told that his father was a pure angel from heaven.

Canning is a family tradition for Morrison

Charlotte Smith
Editor

During the school year you will find Deena Morrison in the classroom sharing her love for math with her students at Fulton County Elementary/Middle School. In the summer, at night and on weekends, Morrison, the mother of two daughters, Caroline (14) and Maddy (10), can be found in her newly built basement kitchen canning a variety of items. In the beginning Morrison canned for her family, now she has started a small business, selling whatever her family is willing to give up.

"I began making salsa and strawberry jelly," she said. "My family loved it so I kept expanding and trying new things." As her garden has grown, so has the variety of food items she canned, which now includes pickles, tomato juice and tomatoes, spaghetti sauce, peach jelly, grape jelly and pepper relish, just to name a few.

Morrison learned the art of canning from her two grandmothers and mother.

Many people, like Deena Morrison's 89-year-old grandmother, Margaret Dunavant, canned out of necessity. "She had five children, so canning was a must," explained Morrison. "Her specialty was jelly."

Some, like Deena's other grandmother, Lola Mae Stephens (who passed away in 2009)

Riverport discusses future of crane, warehouse

Charlotte Smith
Editor

Members of the Hickman-Fulton County Riverport Authority board met twice in November, meeting on the 18th, in special session, extensively discussing the future of the port's crane and then on the 25th, in regular session, discussing the possibility of improving a warehouse owned by the Port.

The crane, which the Port utilizes to handle commodities such as wire and fertilizer, has been deemed unsuitable for use since the boom was damaged. A cable broke damaging the tip of the boom and other sections of the boom back on October 3.

"The insurance company is saying the value of the crane is $273,000," stated Port Director Greg Curlin during the special session. "With the fact that it will cost $220,000 to repair the boom

All you need to fight a fire is a mop, a plank and a wet towel. Mrs. Zula Chandler, 75-year-old grandmother used this unusual apparatus to stop a trash fire that got out of control near her son's home Wednesday morning.

Nominees for Chamber of Commerce directors are: Hugh Lattus, Joye Stokes, Harold Everett, Phillip Choate and James Barber.

Ice on the Mississippi clogged up the Port of Hickman in January 1961. The weather forecasts seem to indicate we're liable to have a repeat next year. Winter struck Hickman Sunday afternoon with mercury descending to a cool 12 degrees early Monday morning. A few snowflakes even went along with the change in temperature Sunday night. This is the second only – cold spell Hickman has had this season. Wonder what 1965 will bring? Children are already crying for snow for Christmas – to make it easier on Santa Claus' sleigh coming this way.

Mrs. Mattie A. Fisher, public health nurse in Fulton County since January 1928 will be honored during a program Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Fisher will be retiring Dec. 31, 1964 after a total of almost 37 years of service.

Upon her return from a "Thanksgiving" visit wither son, Robert, in northern Indiana, the society editor of The Courier found her desk decorated with a bouquet of blooming plum twigs, a gentle reminder that summer yet lingers in "old Kaintuck." The blossoms, taken from a red plum tree on Mrs. Jessie Harper's farm on the Brownsville Road, were brought in by Mrs. Verna Summers. It was explained that the springs were not a chosen few but were a few of the many twigs on this unusual tree.

Charles Rogers, forward on the local basketball team, returned to class Tuesday after an absence of two weeks due to an injured right knee. Although Charles is greatly improved he will be forced to use crutches for some time and will not be able to go back onto the playing floor before January, it is said.

Mr. Will Greer brought in a peculiar insect this week, which has had the editor pouring over zoological illustrations for several days in an effort to identify it. So far he has been unable to positively classify it but it looks like a freak of the cricket family with characteristics of the grasshopper group. Any "bug fans" are invited to lend a hand in naming this creature which Mrs. Greer found crawling in her home.

In order to encourage the citizens to brighten up their homes for the Christmas season and to get a more attractive front downtown, the Lions Club has arranged to offer cash prizes for the best lighting and decorative effect presented in both the residential and the business section this year.

Dave Says...

by Dave Ramsey

Dear Dave,
My husband and I are following your plan, and we're trying to reconcile our on-paper budget with what's going on in our bank account. Most of our bills are due the first half of the month, but we receive most of our income during the second half of the month. Can you help us figure out what to do?

Kathy

Dear Kathy,
If you're actually making a budget and sticking to it, what you're describing is a cash flow bind. You are in charge of your budget until it's on paper. Once it's on paper, it has to accurately represent reality. In your reality, that means a cash flow strain on the first checks and extra money on the second checks.

You won't be able to fix this in just one month, but there is a long-term solution. Move some of the money from your second checks into the first half of the next month. By doing this, you'll start running from the fifteenth to the fifteenth instead of from the first to the first. It will help you stay ahead and avoid getting pinched.

The second part of this equation is that you are in charge of your budget. The budget does not become the boss of you until you get it done. When everything is written and agreed on by you and your husband, that's when the budget becomes the boss. You can't come home with a new shirt or a new purse and hope it fits into the plan. The budget has to be the plumb line by which you build your finances straight and true!

—Dave

Dear Dave,
My husband and I both work two jobs. Together we make about $53,000 a year, and we're trying to get out of debt. We have $35,000 in debt, and most of that is on our truck. I'd like to go back to school and become an ultrasound technician, so we'll have more money. Do you think this is a good idea?

Sarah

Dear Sarah,
Getting more education is always a good idea. For starters, I'd begin doing some research to find out what ultrasound technicians in your area are earning. Then, look into the cost of training at a nearby school.

But I would only recommend starting school after you guys have done some work and cleaned up your finances. You've got a bunch of debt hanging over your heads, and the truck you mentioned is a big part of the problem.

Sell the truck and move down to something very inexpensive to drive for a little while. Then tear into the remainder of the debt and get it paid off as fast as you can. After that, save up a bunch of money so you can go to school debt-free.

I know that may seem like a long time before you can start school, but chances are you can get this done in less than two years. And trust me, going to school debt-free will feel a whole lot better than having another bunch of payments buzzing around your heads for years to come!

CLIENT TURNED VOLUNTEER - Perla Chavez (center), a former Hope Center client, is now a Hope Center volunteer and will graduate college with a degree in social work and will be getting married next November. Chaves is pictured with Karastin Hancock, Communications Director, and Tabitha Smith, Center Director, at Hope Center.

Through a connection with Tamra Parker at Fulton County Schools, staff members discussed their idea of the Fulton County project with her. "She was thrilled and ran with the idea," Hancock explained. "giving us tons of connections."

That is how Hope Fulton was birthed. "As we were in the Fulton County School Systems we saw the need to have Hope active in the students' lives more than just in classes in school," continued Hancock. "They needed to be able to take classes that were specific for what they were going through, and then we began to roll the idea around a mobile Hope Center."

The initial cost to have a satellite office in Fulton County is $11,000, covering the cost of materials and staffing.

Currently on staff with Hancock and Smith are Leslie Wessel, Executive Director and Tracy Prince, Client Service Director.

Smith is connected daily with Hope Center's donors. Without the donors, the mission couldn't go forth. Smith is the one that reaches out to them to help tell them thank you and to get more support from others in the community.

As the Communications Director Hancock runs Social Media, prepares marketing materials, develops contacts, and anything that has to do with writing. "I also am currently, the Abstinence Educator," she said. "I go into the schools and teach."

Prince meets with the clients day in and day out. She sees them, counsels with them, and helps them on the forefront.

Wessel is behind the scenes, working with Hancock, Smith and Prince, as a team.

"And of course, we have many volunteers that help us daily," added Hancock. "Our volunteers keep us going. They see clients, answer the phones, and help in the office. They really do the things that need to be done, so everyone can focus on building hope!"

"It's a great place to be a part of," added Hancock. "it's amazing what a community can accomplish when we team

Letter to the Editor

To the editor:

At this time of great thanksgiving, the families and volunteers with Fulton-Hickman Counties Habitat for Humanity count many blessings. By the participation in all our recent suppers in Hickman, Clinton, and Fulton, by those who are sharing the spirit of the season with the poinsettias, by the church families who have gone into extra giving to keep our building vital, we know we are greatly blessed.

Please know that we count the generous outpouring of financial support to fund the remainder of our work on Maiden Street and beyond as unmerited gain.

To many eyes, our building with the Moore family on Maiden Street in Fulton appears to have been stalled. We are currently working on a contract with a local HVAC company for initial ductwork at the house; after this work is in place, we will hang and finish drywall, lay flooring, paint walls, hang doors and woodwork, and celebrate a house dedication with Elizabeth, Dennis, and Elijah.

As we continue to pray about the vitality of our Habitat affiliate, we realize that God never says "no" to those prayers; his answers are rather "yes," "wait," and "you can't imagine what I have that is much more than you've asked." We continue to trust God's guidance and faithfulness in this work as he answers our prayers.

Blessings of the season and God's grace be with each person in every community, offered from all the people of Habitat with grateful hearts.

Senior Spirit

By Charlotte Smith

In Kentucky, the burden of arthritis is extremely high; approximately 32 percent of Kentuckians have been diagnosed with arthritis. (BRFSS 2013). The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends physical activity as a proven and effective way to decrease the symptoms relating to arthritis pain.

“Is arthritis keeping you from living the life you want? Then take charge with moderate physical activity. Studies show that getting your heart rate up and keeping it up, at least 30 minutes a day, 5 days a week (for a total of 2.5 hours a week), helps reduce the pain, fatigue, and stiffness from arthritis.” (CDC, 2010)

“Regular physical activity doesn’t just relieve arthritis pain in your knees, hips and ankles, but also in your hands, shoulders, and wrists. It can also give you more energy and improve your mood.” (CDC, 2010)

So, how do you get started? Start slowly, be safe, and gradually work your way up by increasing your minutes of physical activity.

Take a Walk.
Choose activities you like and make them a regular part of your day.

Do you have arthritis? Try moderate physical activity, it can help:

- Reduce pain,
- Increase energy,
- Improve muscle health,
- Enhance mobility,
- Keep bones and joints healthy.

The Kentucky Arthritis Program recommends trying evidence-based physical activity programs to help reduce the symptoms of arthritis pain. Programs such as Walk With Ease could safely help you increase physical activity.

Whatever your condition, it will be easier to stay ahead of your pain if you:

- Talk to your doctor about your symptoms, arthritis related or not. Sometimes seemingly unrelated problems are, in fact, connected.

- Give your doctor complete information about your medical conditions and medications, including over-the-counter medications and supplements.

- Ask your doctor for a clear definition of the type of arthritis you have.

- Find out whether any of your joints are already damaged.

In addition, lifestyle changes are important for easing pain.

- Manage weight. Being overweight can increase complications of arthritis and contribute to arthritis pain. Making incremental, permanent lifestyle changes resulting in gradual weight loss is often the most effective method of weight management.

- Quit smoking. Smoking causes stress on connective tissues, which leads to more arthritis pain.

For more information about arthritis programs in Kentucky call 800-633-8100 or email Kentucky.Arthritis@ky.gov

Walter Wood Davis and Paul S. Davis were the only children of Lorenzo Dow and Cora Lee Davis to live to adulthood. Their infant brother Daniel C. died the same year as the parents, 1900. Another brother died at the age of eight in 1904. Walter was raised in the home of his paternal aunt Mary Elizabeth and Albert Roper in the Hickman area. Following his graduation from Hickman High School, he moved to St. Louis where he earned a Master of Law degree from St. Louis University in 1920. After his return from overseas service in World War I, he married Louis Botsai, a nursing graduate of Washington University. Walter W. and Louis David had one child, Cora Louise, who was born December 7, 1922 in St. Louis. The Carnegie Library is home to the museum which houses photos of area veterans. Stop by Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. to visit the museum.

The winter of ‘61 or ‘62 or could of been 1965 was a great time for us West Hickman kids. Schools were closed and the snow was deep. The socks and pants and coats that had been warming and drying from the morning outing were on our house’s only heat source, the living room gas heater. They covered the top except for the pot of Soup Beans. The pot of beans cooking smelled sooo good. I could almost taste the white beans simmered in the fat of the ham hock or fat back that momma always put in and let them ‘slow cook.’ Before actual slow cookers were invented there was the heat stove. “You always put a pan of water on the stove to ‘add steam’ to the room so your mouth and skin don’t dry out so much”, is what my momma said and I believed anything my momma told me. Cooking something all day also solved that problem. ‘Soup beans’ and stewed potatoes were a staple in the Shell home along with cornbread. Today was special because momma had ‘cracklin’ cornbread in the oven. Now, just in case you don’t know what ‘Cracklins’ are, they are pieces of pork skins added to the cornbread that have a crackling sound when eaten but in cornbread they produce a savory chewy goodness with great flavor. Not to be confused with tripe (pig stomach), ‘lites’ (pig lung) or ‘Chitlins’ (pig intestines) all of which are truly unique southern cuisine. My dad always added the cornbread to the bowl of beans along with some of the hot pepper sauce from the peppers he canned from the garden he grew. I do that even now, with sliced white onion on the side.

With our bellies full and a drowse settling in, my mom brings out the dish pan and the dipper we used to drink from the water bucket kept in the kitchen. (At that time our water was from an outside faucet). That pan and that dipper was the cue for us to scream “SNOW CREAM!!! My brother James was in charge of gathering the snow. He was tall enough to reach the center of the windshield of our 1949 Ford where a drift always occurred between it and the hood. Dad explained that was the cleanest snow. No dog pee from the ground snow or other excretions. James had to scrape to get the burnt coal and wood dust from the top layer plus any bird passings, then dig into that fluffy white snow. Momma had already put the ingredients together. If I remember correctly, there was a couple or four cups of sugar with two eggs beaten into the sugar to ‘cook’ them. Some vanilla flavoring added and a can or two of evaporated milk...Sweet milk, now called whole milk, was added and the snow was blended into the mixture until it thickened. It didn’t have the consistency and thickness of store bought but it tasted good and would give you a heck of a ‘brain freeze’. It is a pleasant memory that even my kids enjoyed growing up in Michigan.

Our snow clothes were dry. My brother Johnny and I went outside to meet up with his buddy Donnie Tarkington. He most times ate with us as did any other friend that showed up but he had to go home to dry his stuff as well. We took off to explore the snow drifts and see what we could “do to Jeff.” The three of us headed down the railroad tracks to the trestle that crossed a creek just before reaching the highway 94 bypass and Collins’ sawmill. There were drifts alright. They looked pretty high. The trestle I’d say was about ten or twelve feet above the creek bed. The drifts on the bank shortened that height by at least 4 feet but still that left a good eight foot jump. Of course I was encouraged to test the drift by jumping off to see how deep it was. Assured that snow is soft and wouldn’t hurt; I took the plunge. I was surprised that it didn’t really hurt but I was stuck up to my knees and couldn’t get out. Packed in solid.

I couldn’t even wiggle because my boots were lodged into the rocks put on the bank to avoid erosion. I cried for help from the giggling twosome that had other thoughts in mind.

Dumb and Dumber came down and saw that I could only bend from the knees. They decided I would make a good punching toy. Back then there was an inflatable toy in the guise of a clown or other character that had a round bottom and a weight as well, that would cause it to rock if you punched it and it would rock back for more punishment. Well, after two or ten times they pushed me back and forth to the point of me having to scream the ‘no no words’, “I’M GONNA TELL!”, they relented to help me out of my predicament. It took the two pulling straight up to get me out, leaving my boots to be dug out of a hard packed snow drift. I waited and waited. By the time my boots arrived my feet were freezing and I just wanted to go home. We did and mum was the word, not even about me getting my feet stuck into a fire of straw to warm them. Burnt my socks a little though.

With more snow and school still out, I will share the story of my homemade sled, ‘Black Beauty’ which was neither black nor a beauty and ice hockey, southern style, in my next adventure of ‘Winter in West Hickman’. ~Jeff Shell

A WILDERNESS VOICE

GIVING THANKS

It is Thanksgiving Day as I write. Dorothy and I are having a quite time together counting our blessings. We are thankful for our friends who have offered prayers for us across this past year. We are thankful for those who read this article and continue to encourage us to keep on keeping on. We are also thankful for our friends who are unbelievers.

I have been reading Psalm 145 this morning, a psalm of praise. Let me share one or two verses of the goodness of God. “The Lord is good to all” (v19). God blesses even those who reject him. He withholds judgment and provides them with sunshine and rain, food and shelter and more. “Thou openest thy hand, and satisfies the desire of every living thing” (v16). God not only provides for man, he does not forget his other creatures. “Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; his greatness is unsearchable” (v3).

In v18 and 19, we see how deep and wide, how great is the love of God to every soul. “The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all who call upon him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them.”

and other related parts the insurance company has totaled it."

The board talked about the possibility of scraping the crane and replacing it with a new, refurbished one or refurbishing the current one. Either way, the crane is out of commission until one or the other happens.

During this time of the year, the Port is more focused on loading barges with commodities such as grain.

Curlin provided the board members with price quotes on pedestal cranes and crawlers, realizing the type of crane and size will depend on bridge capacity where the current crane now sits.

Estimated costs of a newer version crane, such as a HC10 Terex American, is right around a half million dollars.

After paying the deductible Curlin estimates that they will receive $240,000 from the insurance company if they choose to replace the Port's current crane.

The additional funding for the updated crane could come from a Delta Regional Authority grant or a low interest loan.

When the board reconvened in open session on Nov. 25, the future of the Port's current crane was not discussed, addressing possible warehouse improvements to the building where Pipe Plus Inc. is now utilizing for its steel pipe operation.

"Our current lease with the former Hickman Pipe and Tube owner ends on December 31, 2014," Curlin said. "We will need to sit down and discuss future plans with Gaylon and Karen Thibodeaux, the owners of Pipe Plus Inc."

No decisions were made on November 25 about the warehouse improvements. However, the board did approve the Operating Reports from September 2014 and October 2014.

Curlin will be traveling to New Orleans in early December to attend the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association Meeting.

Holding down a full time job with the state highway department, Henderson writes during his lunch breaks, at night and on weekends. "I hope to finish the second book within the next couple of weeks," he said. "Right now this will be a three book series with the possibility of adding a fourth."

Future plans for the published author include a trip to Los Angeles, Calif., in the spring to promote his books.

"I would love to make movies some day," he said. "My type of movies would be similar to supernatural type movies."
